The Cane Bottomed Chair. BY WM. M. THACKERAY. In fattered old slippers that toast at the bars, And a ragged old jacket perfumed with eigars, Away from the world and its toils and its cares,

I've a snug little kingdom up four pairs of stairs. To mount to this realm is a toil to be sure, But the fire there is bright and the air rather pure; And the view I beheld on the sunshiny day Is grand through the chimney-pots over the way. This snug little chamber is crammed all in nooks With worthless old knick-knacks and silly old books, And foolish old odds and foolish old ends, Cracked bargains from brokers, cheap keepsakes from Old armor, prints, pictures, pipes, china, (all cracked,) Old rikety tables, and chairs broken-backed; A two-penny treasury, wondrous to see--What matter? 'tis pleasant to you, friend, and me.

No better divan need the Sultan require, Than the creaking old sofa that basks by the fire; And 'tis wonderful, surely, what music you get From the rickety, ramshackle, wheezy spinet. That praying-rug came from a Turcoman's camp; By Tiber once twinkled that brazen old lamp; A Marmeluke fierce yonder dagger has drawn; Tis a murderous knife to toast muffins upon.

Long, long through the hours, and the night, and the riere we lask or our books, and old friends and old times, As we sit in a fog made of rich Latakie, This chamber is pleasant to you, friend, and me. But, of all the cheap treasures that garnish my nest, There's one that I love and cherish the best; For the finest of couches that's padded with hair I never would change thee, my cane-bottomed chair. 'Tis a bandy-legged, high-shouldered, worm-eaten seat, With a creaking old back, and twisted old feet;

But since the fair morning when Fanny sat there, I bless thee and love thee, old cane-bottomed chair. If chairs have but feeling, in holding such charms, A thrill must have passed through your withered old arms I looked, and I longed, and I wished in despair; I wished myself turned to a cane-bottomed chair.

It was but a moment she sat in this place; She'd a carf on her neck, and a smile on her face A smile on her face, and a rose in her hair, And she sat there, and bloomed in my cane-bottome

And so I have valued my chair ever since, Like the shrine of a saint, or the throne of a prince ; Saint Fanny, my patroness sweet I declare, The queen of my heart and my cane-bottomed chair. When the candles burn low, and the company's gone, sit here alone, but we yet are a pair-My Fanny I see in my cane-bottomed chair. She comes from the past and revisits my room; She looks as she then did, all beauty and bloom-

And vonder she sits in my cane-bottomed chair The Song of Hlawatha. The following are the opening lines of Longfellow's

So smiling and tender, so fresh and so fair;

Ye who love the haunts of Nature, Love the sunshine of the meadow, Love the shadow of the forest, Love the wind among the branches, And the rain-shower and the snow-storm. And the gushing of great rivers Through the palisades of pine trees, And the thunder in the mountains, Whose innumerable echoes Flap like eagles in their cyries--Lis en to these wild traditions, To this song of Hiawatha!

Ye who love a nation's legends,

Love the ballads of the people,

That like voices from afar off

Call to us to pause and listen, Speak in tones so plain and childlike, Scarcely can the ear di tinguish Whether they are sing or speken-Listen to the Indian Legend, To this song of Hiawatha. Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple, Who have faith in God and Nature, Who believe that in all ages Every human heart is human. I nat in even savage bosoms There are longings, yearings, strivings, For the good they comprehend not; That the feeble hands and helpless, Groping blindly in the darkness. Touch God's right hand in that darkness

And are lifted up and strengthened-Listen to this simple story, To this song of Hiawatha. Ye who sometimes in your rambles Through the green lanes of the country, Where the tangled barberry bushes Hang their tufts of crimson berries Over stone walls gray with mosses, Pause by some neglected grave-yard, For a while to muse and ponder On a half-effaced inseri, tion, Written with little of song craft, Homely phrases, but each letter Full of hope, and yet of heart-break, Full of all tender pathos Of the Here and the Hereafter-Stay and read this rude inscription,

The Discovery Bark Resolute, The Discovery bark Resolute, which arrived here on Sunday morning last, though a noble vessel, was not rescued from her perilous position in the Arctic regions and finally brought safely into port, without very great labor and difficuly, and much bazard to the brave men who underwent so many hardships and ran so serious a risk of their lives in the undertaking. She was, when abandoned by those on board, fast locked in the ice for a vast distance all around her, and could not, as Captain Buddington informs us, have been less than one hundred and fifty miles from the nearest open water. Under such circumstances, it is his opinion that the British officers were fully justified in abandoning her as they did. It was, he says, a natural impossibility for them to have extricated themselves for at least a twelvemonth, and very doubtful whether they could have done it at all, before their provision failed them, for though, when the Americans took possession of her, about eighteen months afterward, she was well supplied, she had by no means enough on board to have lasted a crew consisting of seventy five souls that length of time. With the generous feelings of a true sai or, Captain Buddington is warm and earnest in declaring that Sir Edward Balaber, as well as Captain Kellett and his crew, were perfect y right in the course they took, and that it is ungenerous and unmanly to censure them for it. They had done their duty like men, and to have attempted more would have been nothing better than foolhardiness. However this may be, every one will accord the righest credit to the officers and crew of the George Henry, for their gallant, is severing and finally successful efforts in saving and bringing home the derelict vessel Her water tanks had burst by the in tense frost of that frightful climate, and when Captan B. and his men went on beard, the water was up to the lower deck, and the whole c.ew were engaged fourteen hours a day for three days in getting her clear, when the immense masses of ice on one side gave her a list aport, which they were a long time in relieving so as to bring her to an even keel. All these difficulties were at length surmounted, the officers and men of the George Henry were divided, and both vessels commenced the task of working into

The George Henry, after severe trials, succeeded in reaching home on the 20th instant, and the Resolute arrived on Sunday morning. The latter expe rienced an almost continuous series of head gales of wind, in several instances amounting to almost hurricanes, and was at last driven South into the latitude of Bermuda. In latitude 35° 67/ she spoke the hermaphrodite brig Montgomery, Capt. M'Intyre, of Booth Bay, from Boston, for the West Indies, who furnished some necessary supplies. Afterward spoke in lat. 37, ion. 67, ship Martha Whittemore, four days from Richmond for Liverpool. The Resolute is perhaps one of the staunchest ships ever built, as nearly ice-proof as any ve-sel ever fitted for the pendous navigation of the Folar seas, and all her preparations for encountering the incidents of the rugged region to which she was sent, were as perfect as skill and experience and a liberal government could make them. A large arnament of brass cannon and Minie rifles in perfect order sufficient for any emergency were found on board as well as an immense amount of clothing, and everything else that could conduce to the comfort of the crew or contribute to the objects or the

Nor were the intellectual wants of those on board forgotten, for there was a valuable and extensive librany of well selected books on board, though we are sorry to learn that the library has suffered somewhat from t'e vicissitudes of the sea, and that boat loads of books had to be thrown overboard, saturated with water, and rendered utterly worthless. There was also found on board a considerable quantity of whalebone, but whether taken by the ship's crew or purchased of the Fsquimaux was not known. The Resolute is of course an object of great curiosity, and has been visited by considerable numbers. What steps the owners and those interested in the George Henry will deem it their duty to take in relation to the rescued vessel we do not know, nor do we know what will be done about her by the British Government, but as there is not apt to be anything small found in that government, in pecuniary transactions, we have but lit le idea that her Majesty will be disposed to interfere in the hardy seamen's well earned right to their prize, especially as she would have no shadow of justice on her side. There never was a case in which there was less semblance of ownership left to the original proprietors of a flotsam than there is here, and believing so, we have the impression that the sailors will be quietly left to the posses-ion of their prize.
